

NEW YORK WILL SUPPORT TAFT

Every Indication Points To This Conclusion Despite Democratic Arguments.

IS THE PIVOTAL STATE, HOWEVER

Brief Resume Of The Situation From A Critical Inspection Of The Conditions That Exist.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 12.—It is not stretching the truth to say that the presidential campaign of 1908 depends upon the vote of the state of New York. Just as other presidential campaigns for years back have centered around the Empire commonwealth, it you look back into the political history of the United States you will find that the state of New York, always possessing the largest individual electoral vote of any state in the Union, has always been the thermometer by which presidential results have been read.

The situation today is only a little different from the situation in years previous. If Mr. Bryan can carry every state which Parker carried in 1904 and which Bryan himself carried in 1896 and 1900 he can, with the electoral vote of New York, be elected to the presidency.

The pivotal state of New York, showing the four candidates whose fate may depend upon the New York vote, namely, Governor Hughes and Presidential Nominee Taft, on the Republican side, and Democratic Candidate for Governor Chandler and Democratic Candidate for President Bryan on the other.

Again, therefore, the political complexion of New York becomes of vital concern, as it has many and many a day in the campaign calendar of previous years. When it is remembered that but three presidents of the United States were elected without the electoral vote of New York in the electoral college it may be realized what the electoral vote of New York means.

Hughes in 1896, Grant in 1868, and Hayes in 1876 are the only candidates for president who ever received a commission without the electoral support of New York. Not only are these three the only nominees who ever succeeded without New York but in addition there are many candidates whom New York has supported who would never have won had the New York vote been changed. For example, in 1811 Polk received 170 votes to Clay's 135 in the electoral college. New York's vote in the college was 36 for Polk. Had New York cast her 36 votes for Clay he would have been elected president. In 1848 Taylor received 163 votes to 127 for Cass and New York cast her 36 for Cass the Melhander would have succeeded to the presidency.

In 1861 probably the most striking example in history of the political power and prestige of New York appears. This was the memorable campaign between Cleveland and Blaine in the electoral college. Cleveland's vote was 219. Blaine's was 182. New York cast her vote for Cleveland but Cleveland carried New York by just 1,139 votes in a total far exceeding one million ballots. In other words, in 1861 the change of one vote out of more than a million in New York would have elected Blaine to the presidency instead of Cleveland, at the time of his first term.

With such precedents at hand it is no wonder that the political complexion of New York for a study of political problems. In 1908 the republican will tell you that Bryan cannot be elected even if he carried New York, because of the fact that in addition to New York he must hold every state which Parker held in 1904, and which he himself had in the two campaigns preceding. But, on the other hand, the democrat will tell you that Bryan is to have not only all the other vote but Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Oklahoma, possibly West Virginia and then sovereign New York in addition.

But New York has been quite safely republican for a number of years past. In 1901 New York turned in 855,533 ballots for Roosevelt as against 652,981 votes for Parker, and it must be remembered that Parker as well as Roosevelt was a native son of the Empire State. In other words, when the next national election by the presence of a native New Yorker on the ticket was equally divided between the republican and democratic ticket, New York choose the republican nominee by 175,000 majority. This year the republican ticket offers a native New Yorker for vice president, and it must not be forgotten that this will surely be a magnet to draw some votes.

What New York thinks of Mr. Bryan, however, is suggested to some degree by the vote it gave him when he ran the last two times. In 1900 New York gave McKinley 821,902, and it gave Mr. Bryan 678,386. In 1896 New York gave Mr. McKinley 819,838 and Mr. Bryan 551,368. In other words New York gave Mr. Bryan 125,000 more votes the second time he ran than it did the first. If this ratio of increased affection apparent from 1896 the republican ticket and the republican candidates have the advantage as the race opens, and unless unforeseen obstacles arise they ought to be able to hold the advantage to the end. In the meantime the country will again watch New York with eager eye, for in the light of the nation's experience it is almost accuracy itself to say that as goes New York goes the election.

AMERICAN BOARD MEETING OF CONGREGATIONALISTS

Commissioners Of Missions Gather In New York For Yearly Meeting.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, Oct. 12.—The annual meeting of the American board of commissioners for missions of the Congregational church opened this afternoon in the Clinton Avenue Congregational church in Brooklyn. The visitors were greeted by the Rev. Albert J. Lyman, and the response was made by Dr. Samuel B. Capen of Boston, president of the board. Routine business was followed by the reports of Rev. Dr. Cornelius H. Patton, secretary of the home department, and the Rev. Dr. James L. Batson, secretary of the foreign department.

The reports of these and of other officers showed the status of the board to be in a satisfactory condition. Receipts from all sources for the year were $3032 more than in the previous year. The total receipts were $837,399. The expenses of the board for the year were $880,011, against $877,621 for the preceding year.

One of the leading features of the meeting is the general gratification at the revolution in Turkey and the religious freedom which is now fact in that country where hitherto it has not been possible to send the literature of the board without its passing through the hands of a censor, or being sent to the consuls for distribution. Already, according to information from the mission fields, the attendance upon the institutions of the board has greatly increased and there is no room for the scholars who desire to study in the board's schools.

AMERICAN LEAGUE CHAMPIONS

BALLOON BURSTS
4,000 FEET IN AIR

STARTLING ACCIDENT IN THE INTERNATIONAL RACE.

YANKEES IN DIRE PERIL

Envelope Forms Parachute and Forces and Post Escape Almost Unhurt—Twenty-Three Airships Start.

Berlin, Oct. 12.—The international balloon race, which started Sunday from the suburb of Schmargendorf, was the occasion of a thrilling accident, two American aeronauts having a miraculous escape from death. The American balloon conqueror, the only American built craft in the contest, having on board A. Holland Forbes and Augustus Post, less than two minutes after the start, burst at an altitude of 4,000 feet.

For 2,000 feet it shot down like a bullet, and then the torn silk bag assumed the shape of a parachute, and the rapidity of the descent was checked. Coming close to the earth, however, the basket smashed into the roof of a house, but the two men escaped with but slight injuries.

The race, in which 23 balloons participated, representing Great Britain, France, Germany, the United States, Switzerland, Italy, Belgium and Spain, started at three o'clock in the afternoon in the presence of at least 80,000 spectators.

Collapse of the Conqueror.
The second batch of eight balloons was led by Forbes in the Conqueror, which was started with some difficulty owing to a gusty wind and too much ballast. But eventually it shot up and reached in high altitude in an incredibly short period, the basket swaying violently. Then almost instantly a cry of horror arose from the crowd, who saw the silk collapse and shouted: "The balloon is ripping up."

Thousands who had gathered there stood for a moment petrified. Some turned away, fainting as they saw the balloon falling with lightning-like rapidity. At the same time showers of sand and appurtenances of the balloon shot downward with equal rapidity and then daylight was seen through the envelope, great ragged edges of the silk showing on other side.

"Wonderful Escape from Death."
"They are killed," went in a shriek through the crowd, but shortly the remainder of the envelope appeared to take first a triangular shape and then was transformed into a sort of parachute at the top of the net and the progress of the wrecked balloon was considerably arrested.

It came down slower and slower, meanwhile being swept by the wind far to the southeast, and finally disappeared from view behind a black of houses. The suspense among the crowd was terrible. But a few minutes later a telephone message was received from Philadelphia which announced that the men had landed and had not been seriously injured.

A. Holland Forbes, who appeared to be very little the worse for his experience except that he was suffering somewhat from shock, gave a thrilling account of the accident.

Forbes Tells of the Accident.
"We had some difficulty," he said, "in getting away, but once we left the ground everything seemed to be right. We mounted almost perpendicularly to an altitude of 4,000 feet. As I looked at the recording instrument to make a note of the altitude, I heard a peculiar sound and said to Post: 'That sounds dangerous.' Immediately I saw that the envelope was rapidly deflating, the gas escaping in clouds. Instantly I threw the appendix clear of the basket and the ropes and, drawing my jackknife, cut the ropes that were attached to the 23 bags of sand hanging around the basket."

Envelope Forms a Parachute.
"Both of us sprang up and held on to the ring above, hoping in this way to avoid the crash. Then above us could be seen the envelope gradually spreading out. We continued to fall with terrible speed until a sort of parachute had been formed and then we knew that unless a further mishap occurred, we would probably be saved from death."

"Our speed did not decrease as much as we should have liked and we were still moving at a rapid pace when we reached the tops of the high houses in the streets, which increased the danger. We passed over one roof, almost touching it, and still holding on to the ring. We avoided the next block, but finally struck the mansard roof of a house in the black neighborhood and the net and envelope fell to the opposite side."

All the balloons Sunday took a similar direction which would lead, if the same course were followed, into southern Russia.

Don't think that because you may have a "club" or two promised that you have the Gazette's contest clinched. The thing to do is to get them. Don't be too sure. The only way to be sure is to get the subscriptions and keep getting them until the contest is finished.

Overassurance is deadly—a narcotic which drowns caution and alertness—relaxed energy means an opening for the ones behind. If you fought to get up, there's even more reason why you should fight to stay up. Your real antagonist is the hard-hitting, clean-cut people who feel the mood of battle in their blood and bone—who know that they can get anything, provided they fight for it long enough. They'll give no odds and they'll take no quarter. You can't put them down except by keeping ahead of them. The way to keep ahead is to get the subscriptions before the "other fellow" does. Get a "club" or two while you have a chance.

MORE ABOUT EDINBURGH

To Be Visited By The Gazette's Grand Prize Winner.

The candidate in the Gazette's great Trip to Europe and Diamond contest who is fortunate enough to be declared the winner over such an array of formidable rivals as our list contains will be one who has enough fighting blood coursing through their veins to fully appreciate the privilege of personally going over and examining the old buildings and streets where Royalty and aristocracy in ages past were wont to parade and feast in the sunshine of peace or suffer the tortures of bloody strife, the fruits of family feuds and conspiracies of a semi-barbaric period.

High street in Edinburgh, Scotland, from Holyrood Palace to the castle a mile and a half distant is lined with old residences and ancient public buildings all of which are connected with tales of historic interest. Many of these have subterranean passages which were used for escape in case their strongholds were assaulted by forces too powerful to resist. These underground passages have undoubtedly been the means of saving many lives but they have also been a very important factor in crimes that have had a direct bearing on the destiny of nations. It is claimed that there was a secret passage underground running clear from the Palace of Holyrood to the castle which for centuries were the residences of kings and queens. It is very easy to believe this to be true as it is only natural that Royalty, especially during such uncertain times should want some means of leaving their precious bodies away from the clutches of some ambitious rascal or strenuous claimant to the crown and be able to reach another residence in safety.

There are several historic spots and houses on High street that are worth a chapter to themselves, and many of the old-fashioned palaces in which the dukes and earls and princes lived in olden times have almost vanished, but all houses in which men have lived and died are haunted houses, and there seems no reason why the spirits of the tough old Scotchmen who used to be so energetic in life should not continue their interest in modern affairs.

In the center of the wide place in the street, under the shadow of the statue of the Duke of Buccleuch, is the form of a heart made with colored stones in the pavement. It is called "The Heart of Midlothian," and around it was the meeting place of popular assemblies for several centuries. Here stood the gallows, "the maiden" and hundreds of people were executed upon this spot. The noblest victims were the Earl of Morton, who was regent under James VI, and was hated by everybody; the proud Earl of Montrose and the two Dukes of Argyll, father and son, whose executions were thirty years apart. The heads of these and thousands of "lesser men were" impaled upon the iron pickets of a fence that surrounded the place. That ghastly spectacle was quite familiar to the people of Edinburgh at one time.

Here stood also the old Tolbooth, the prison, which Sir Walter Scott has immortalized in his story called "The Heart of Midlothian," and which tells the terrible experience of Miss Deans.

The city is divided into two parts, the old and the new. The new part of the city is very modern and up-to-date, but the old city is still as old-fashioned as "lesser men were."

The old city has nearly all of the public institutions, except the post-office, the art gallery, the portrait gallery, the historical museum and the public records office.

St. Giles' Cathedral stands in the center of High street, as I have already told you. The statue of the Duke of Buccleuch is at one end and at the other is a fat and ungainly figure of Charles I. in bronze on horseback. On one side are the law courts and on the other the city hall, which was formerly a royal palace.

Attached to the city hall is a very interesting municipal museum, which is visited by comparatively few strangers because they do not know anything about it. Its greatest treasure is the original copy of the "covenant" signed by some twelve hundred clergymen and others who refused to accept the dictation of the king in religious matters and started the civil war that lasted so long. There are many manuscripts and relics of Robert Burns, Sir Walter Scott and other famous Scotchmen. The custodian insists that they have more of Burns' manuscripts than can be found in any other place, and among them is the original of "The Kirk's Alarm," which begins:

Orthodox! orthodox! who believe in John Knox!

Let me sound an alarm to your conscience.

The building that was formerly the meeting place of the Scottish parliament is now the seat of the highest courts of the land, and many of their customs are quaint and curious, having been preserved from ancient times.

There are two great libraries in this building containing many rare and curious manuscripts and books and the most complete collection of legal lore in Scotland. In a case in the center of the principal reading-room are the original manuscripts of "Waverley" and "Marmion," and the original "Confession of Faith" signed by James VI. in 1580, in which he proclaimed himself a Protestant—but he changed his mind shortly after.

WAS LADYSMITH SAFE-BLOWER AUTHOR OF TWO LOCAL JOBS?

HARRY CALE, EX-PRISON-BIRD AND PAL OF ALBERT DORSEY, ARRESTED IN CHICAGO.

WILL ARRIVE HERE TONIGHT

Is Alleged to Have Made Startling Confession to Local Youth, Who Admits Being on the Scene when Herman Sandbagged.

Chief of Police George M. Appleby's good judgment and prompt and thorough investigation of a slender clue may lead not only to the conviction of the burglars who stole $110 from the safe in Wilbur Carle's store Friday night and the footpads who held up and robbed Herman Sandbag of John Creek near the Grand hotel at two o'clock Saturday morning, but also to the incarceration of one of the ringleaders of the gang that cracked the safe in the state bank at Ladysmith and carried away $3,000 during the early morning of Tuesday, Sept. 8. It is quite possible, also, that members of the same band plundered the bank at Warrens, 90 miles southeast of Ladysmith, and carried away $2,200 on Saturday, Oct. 3, and are responsible for the whole chain of burglaries that have occurred in Wisconsin within the past fortnight.

Accidental Beginning.
Albert Dorsey, a local youth with a bad record who recently completed a year's term in the state prison for a theft committed at Benson & Lane's bakery in the spring of 1907, was found in an intoxicated condition by Night Patrolman William J. Mason some time before daylight Saturday morning and looked up in the jail. At that time nothing was known by the police either of the robbery at Carle's store or the hold-up, and it was not until late Saturday afternoon that the officers ran down and verified a report to the effect that the night foreman at Benson & Lane's had witnessed an attack on a stranger by two highwaymen in the rear of the Grand hotel. The stranger, Poeschke, was located at the International Inn, where he had been taken to recover from his effects of a night on the town. He explained that he had formerly resided in Janesville and felt too sheepish about being held up in his old haunts to report the matter to the police office. A tall individual, he said, had snugged him from behind and held him while a little fellow went through his pockets. They had taken a silver watch, a knife, and a pocket-book belonging to his wife which contained seven or eight dollars. His own purse, stuffed with about $100 in bills and secreted in an inside vest pocket, was not discovered. Dorsey, as it chanced, had not been released in the morning along with the other "drunks," against whom no charges were to be preferred in court. The belongings taken away from him and left in the station headquarters included a silver watch and a jack-knife. Poeschke identified these articles as his own property and Dorsey was at once put in the "await-box."

Story Told by Dorsey
When confronted with the evidence of his participation in the hold-up, Dorsey told the following story: Early Friday evening he had been drinking with Poeschke in Podewell's saloon. Poeschke seemed to have a good sized roll of bills which he flashed on one or two occasions. Later on Dorsey encountered on the street a man named Harry Cale, who had worked in the state prison since Dorsey's new home and had completed a seven-year term for robbery, second offense, about the time Dorsey got out. The erstwhile prison associate proceeded to cement old ties with numerous rounds of drinks and Cale, who was quite as "mellow" as Dorsey, exhibited a good-sized wad of greenbacks; invited Dorsey to accompany him to Chicago for a "time"; and in a burst of confidence told the Janesville youth that he and two other fellows robbed the Ladysmith bank, that a division of the swing was to be made in the metropolis the next day, and that his share in this and other enterprises would be $2,000. They were proceeding in a leisurely manner towards Meshun's, where Cale wished to get his overcoat and knicker, and devoting some attention to a bottle of booze which Dorsey had gotten from some saloon, after hours, when, in a dark place on South High street, the Ladysmith associate, according to his story, nudged Cale and whispered to him: "There comes a fellow who's got plenty of money." Then, without any intimation to Dorsey of his intentions, Cale sprang upon his victim, Dorsey's role, according to his story, was merely that of an onlooker. Afterwards Cale told him that he had only gotten $2 in cash and offered him the watch and knife as a gift. He accepted them.

Cale Captured in Chicago
Chief Appleby did not accept all of Dorsey's story, but he thought he discerned enough in it to warrant a careful inquiry. After telephoning to Wauwaton and securing a description of Cale, he communicated with the officers at Fond du Lac and learned additional details regarding his probable haunts in the metropolis. He then called up the detective bureau at Chicago and told them everything he had learned. This morning the following dispatch was delivered at the local headquarters:

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 12.
George Appleby, Janesville, Wis.
James Cale in custody. Send officer. Have trace of others: "Boston Tom" and "Whitish Harry." They are safe-blowers.

P. D. O'BRIEN, Captain Detective Bureau.

The local police tangle and the possibility that an effort might be made to question the validity of an arrest made by him, prevented Chief Appleby from following up the trail he had discovered and Sheriff I. U. Fisher, armed with a warrant, left for Chicago on the 12:40 noon train. A reward of $1,000 is said to have been offered for the capture of the Ladysmith bank-robbers but the local officers are not likely to get any of the proceeds.

Son of a Congressman
Cale is a son of the Alaskan congressman and former sheriff of Fond du Lac county, Thomas Cale, who visited at the city hall in Janesville a little over a year ago. He is about 35 years of age and has served two terms in prison. Former City Marshal William Appleby was well acquainted with the father and loaned the son $2 in Milwaukee a few weeks ago.

May "Plead Insanity"
Dorsey appeared in municipal court this morning and entered a plea of not guilty to the charge of receiving stolen property. He wished to waive examination and have the date of his trial set at once, but District Attorney Fisher would not agree to this and wished to examine the evidence with a view to changing the charge to larceny from the person. The prisoner wanted to know if the State was not going to provide him with a lawyer and was informed that this could not be done until after the examination. Judge Charles Lange fixed his bail at $1,000 and being unable to furnish the bonds he was committed to the county jail pending the proceedings against him. It is understood that his mother, who was in the courtroom, has volunteered a suggestion from some source or other to have a plea of insanity advanced in defense of her son.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janeville Daily Gazette, Oct. 12, 1868.—Another Destructive Fire.—The dread alarm of fire was sounded again about 1 o'clock on Sunday morning, announcing the fire department to the scene of a conflagration on the corner of River and Dodge streets. The fire was discovered by the merchants' police on the east side of the river, who from their beat at the West end of Milwaukee street bridge, thought that they saw some unusual light in that vicinity, and hastening there found a pile of shavings in the corner of Adam Wilson's shop in a blaze, and at once gave the alarm. The progress of the flames was very rapid, however, and despite all efforts Mr. Wilson's shop was entirely destroyed with a great share of its contents, as were two other buildings owned by E. S. Harrows, used for wagon and carriage furnishing purposes. A small house on Dodge street owned by a Mr. West was partially consumed and a building occupied by Wm. A. Dinger was damaged to the extent of one or two hundred dollars.

The loss of Mr. Wilson is between $8,000 and $10,000. The insurance is light. The loss on the buildings was light. Mr. Harrows were worth some $500 or $800. There was no insurance. Dinger's building was somewhat damaged but can be readily repaired. The dwelling house of Mr. West was nearly burned.

That the fire was the work of an incendiary there can be no doubt, as no fire had been used this fall in the rooms where the flames were first discovered. There is a suspicion about that a gang of rowdy boys are engaged in this diabolical business.

FIERCE BATTLE IN MID AIR

Police Struggle with Maniac on Wilk Hamsburg Bridge Tower.

New York, Oct. 12.—Atop the great iron tower at the Brooklyn end of the Williamsburg bridge a thrilling struggle took place Sunday while hundreds of persons looked on from below. An insane man, who had climbed the tower watchman, climbed an iron stairway to the top of the tower, 535 feet above the East river, and was preparing for a leap into the river when two policemen climbed up after him.

He turned upon the bluecoats with a razor, and then on the narrow footing at the dizzy height a ten-minute battle took place. To those who gazed aloft it seemed hours instead of minutes before the man was overpowered.

CUBS DEFEAT THE TIGERS

WIN SECOND OF THE WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP GAMES.

Seven Innings Without a Run, Then Chicago Makes Six in Great Batting Rally.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—Moving with the precision and accuracy of an intricate machine the champion Cubs drove another spike into their second world's championship pennant pole by defeating the American league champions from Detroit, 6 to 1, at the West Side park Sunday afternoon.

After both teams had played a scorching battle for seven innings, with the score 0 to 0, the Cubs broke from the leash in which they had been held by the wonderful curves of Wild Bill Donovan, the premier pitcher of the Tigers.

In the eighth inning they slashed Donovan's hitherto enigmatic curves for a home run, a three bagger, a double, and three singles, and this combination, judiciously mixed with a base on balls, three stolen bases, and a wild pitch, netted the champions six runs and an overwhelming victory.

Joe Tinker smashed out a home run in the eighth with Hoffman waiting on first base, and sent the first two Cub runs across the plate. That was enough to win, but the Cubs—finding that Donovan was not invincible—battled to and finally smote everything he offered them.

It was simply a case of the better team winning. The Cubs outclassed Hughes Jennings' men at every stage of the struggle. They outhit them, outfielded them, outthought them, and outman them.

The attendance was officially given as 17,560, the gross receipts being $29,927.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 12.—The first game of the world's baseball championship struggle went to the Chicago National league team Saturday afternoon by a score of 10 to 6, the Detroit American leaguers being beaten at most stages of a sensational contest.

NEW DESIGNS FOR STAMPS.

They Will Be Most Artistic Ever Issued by the Government.

Washington, Oct. 12.—The bureau of engraving and printing has completed designs suggested by Postmaster General Meyer for a new issue of United States postage stamps. The new stamps will be of the following denominations: One cent, two cent, three cent, four cent, five cent, six cent, eight cent, ten cent, 15 cent, 20 cent and one dollar. It will be some weeks before all the denominations are put on the market. The two-cent stamp will be the first distributed, and it is expected that shipments to postmasters will commence some time in November. The new issue has been designed with the object of obtaining the greatest simplicity commensurate with artistic results. The profile has been taken in each instance, instead of a full view, giving a better effect. All the stamps are of a similar design containing a head in an ellipse, the only decorative being laurel leaves on either side of the ellipse. The one-cent stamp contains the head of Franklin, while all the others will bear that of Washington, taken from busts by Houdon. The colors are the reds and blues of the early stamps. Director Ralph of the bureau of engraving and printing regards the new stamps as the most artistic ever issued by the government.

The Importance of a Tight Oven Door.

To have an oven door on your range that you can depend on, one that will never warp, but will always remain tight, is as fine a point as you can wish for. The minute an oven door frame starts to warp you start to have poor bakings and so often never know the cause of it. Malleable iron door frames never warp or get out of shape, that's why they use them on the MAJESTIC Range.

Not the cheapest but the least expensive.

Chapter 3

O pick up once more and tighten and knot together the loosened threads which represented the unfinished record that his race had woven into the social fabric of the metropolis was merely an automatic matter for Selwyn.

His own people had always been among the makers of that fabric. Into part of the vast and intricate pattern they had woven an inconspicuously honorable record—chronicles of births and deaths and marriages, a plain memorandum of plain living and up-right dealing with their fellow men.

Some public service of modest nature they had performed, not seeking it, not shirking, accomplishing it calmly when it was intrusted to them.

His forefathers had been, as a rule, professional men—physicians and lawyers. His grandfather died under the walls of Chapultepec castle while twining a tourniquet for a cursing dragon; an uncle rammed bullets into the breast of a desperado at Matamoros; an only brother at Montana Point skinned in the trenches before San Juan.

His father's services as division medical officer in Sheridan's cavalry had been perhaps no more devoted, no more loyal than the services of thousands of officers and troopers, and his reward was a pension offer, declined. He practiced until his wife died, then retired to his country home, from which house his daughter Nina was married to Austin Gerold.

Mr. Selwyn, Sr., continued to pay his taxes on his father's house in Tenth street, voted in that district, spent a month every year with the Gerolds and judiciously enlarged the family reservation in Greenwood, whither he retired in due time.

The first gun off the Florida keys sent Selwyn's only brother from his law office in hot haste to San Antonio. That same gun interrupted Selwyn's connection with Neergard & Co., operators in Long Island real estate, and a year later the captaincy offered him in a western volunteer regiment operating on the island of Leyte completed the rupture.

And now he was back again, a chance career ended, with option of picking up the severed threads—his inheritance at the loom—and of retreating, warp and weft, and continuing the pattern according to the designs of the tufted, tilted pile yarn knotted in by his ancestors before him.

Meanwhile he was looking for two things—an apartment and a job—the first energetically combated by his immediate family.

It was rather odd—the scarcity of jobs. Of course Austin offered him one, which Selwyn declined at once, enraging his brother-in-law.

"But what do I know about the investment of trust funds?" demanded Selwyn. "You wouldn't take me if I were not your wife's brother, and that's nepotism."

Austin's harmless fury raged for nearly ten minutes, after which he cheered up, relinquished his chair and resumed his discussion with Selwyn concerning the merits of various boys' schools, the victim in prospective being Billy.

A little later, reverting to the subject of his own enforced idleness, Selwyn said, "I've been on the point of going to see Neergard, but somehow I can't quite bring myself to it—slipping into his office as a rank failure in one profession to ask him if he has any use for me again."

"Stuff and fancy!" growled Gerold. "It's all stuff and fancy about your being any kind of a failure. If you want to resume with that Dutchman, go to him and say so. If you want to invest anything in his Long Island schemes he'll take you in fast enough. He took in Gerold and some twenty thousand."

"Isn't he very prosperous, Austin?"

"Very—on paper. Long Island farm lands and mortgages on Hampton boulevards are not frequent propositions to me. But there's always one more way of making a living after you counted 'em all up on your fingers. If you've any capital to offer Neergard, he won't shirk for help."

"On the jump? Yes—both ways. Oh, I suppose that Neergard is all right. If he wasn't I wouldn't have permitted Gerold to go into it. Neergard sticks to his commissions and doesn't back his fancy in certified checks. I only know exactly how he operates. I only know that we find nothing in that sort of thing for our own account. But Fink, Harmon & Co. do. That's their affair too. It's all a matter of taste, I tell you."

Selwyn reflected: "I believe I'd go and see Neergard if I were perfectly sure of my personal sentiments toward him. He's been civil enough to me, of course, but I have always had a curious feeling about Neergard—that he's forever on the edge of doing something—doubtful."

"His business reputation is all right. He shaves the dead like a safety razor, but he's never yet cut through it. On principle, however, look out for an apple faced Dutchman with a thin nose and no lips. Neither Jew, Yankee nor American stands any chance in a deal with that type of financier. Personally my feeling is this: If I've got to play games with Julius Neergard, I'd prefer to be his partner. And so I told Gerold. By the way?"

Austin checked himself, looked down at his cigar, turned it over and over several times, then continued quietly: "By the way, I suppose Gerold is like other young men of his age and times—immersed in his own affairs—thoughtless perhaps, perhaps a trifle selfish in the cross country gallop after pleasure. I was rather severe with him about his neglect of his sister. He ought to have come here to pay his respects to you too."

"Oh, don't put such notions into his head!"

"Yes, I will," insisted Austin. "How ever indifferent and thoughtless and selfish he is to other people, he's got to be considerate toward his own family, and I told him so. Have you seen him lately?"

"No," admitted Selwyn. "Not since the first time when he came to do the devil by you?"

"No, but don't!"

"Yes, I will," repeated his brother-in-law. "And I'm going to have a thorough explanation with him and learn what he's up to. He's got to be decent to his sister. He ought to report to me occasionally. That's all there is to it. He has entirely too much liberty, with his bachelor quarters and his house parties and his cruises on Neergard's boat."

He got up, casting his cigar from him, and moved about busily, muttering of matters to be regulated, and finally told Selwyn, looking out of the window across the park, knew perfectly well that young Gerold, now of age, with a small portion of his handsome income at his mercy, was just the regulating stage and beyond the authority of Austin. There was no harm in him. He was simply a joyous, pleasure loving cub, chuck full of energetic life, ethics, good and bad, right and wrong, out of which, formed from the acts which became habits, character nature. This was his estimate of Gerold.

The next morning, riding in the park with Eileen, he found a chance to speak cordially of her brother. "I've meant to look up Gerold," he said, as though the neglect were his own fault, "but every time something happens to switch me on to another track."

"I'm afraid that I do a great deal of the switching," she said, "don't I? But you've been so nice to me and to the children that—"

Miss Gerold's horse was behaving badly, and for a few moments she became too thoroughly occupied with her mount to finish her sentence.

The belated groom galloped up, prepared for emergencies, and he and Selwyn sat their saddles watching a pretty battle for mastery between a beautiful horse determined to be bad and a very determined young girl who had decided he was going to be good.

Once or twice the excitement of a halfhearted sent the color flying into Selwyn's temples. The brittle path was narrow and stiff with freezing sand, and the trees were too near for such lively maneuvers, but Miss Gerold had made up her mind, and Selwyn already had a humorous idea that this was no light matter. The horse found it serious enough, too, and suddenly concluded to be good. And the pretty scene ended so abruptly that Selwyn laughed aloud as he rejoined her.

"There was a man—Boots Lansing—in Hammer's command. One night on Sunday the boys men rushed up, and Lansing got into the six foot major's boots by mistake—seven languages, you know—and his horse bucked him clean out of them."

"Hence his Christian name, I suppose," said the girl. "But why such a story, Captain Selwyn? I believe I struck to my saddle."

"With both hands," he said cordially, always alert to please her, for she was adorable when teased, especially in the beginning of their acquaintance before she had found out that it was a habit of his, and her bright confusion always delighted him into further mischief.

"But I wasn't a bit worried," he continued. "You had him so firmly around the neck. Besides, what horse or man could resist such a pleading pair of arms around the neck?"

"What you say," she said, flushing up, "is exactly the way I shall do my pleading with the two animals you mention."

Later she remarked, "It's just as Nina says, after all, isn't it?"

"I suppose so," he replied suspiciously. "What?"

"That Gerold isn't really very wicked, but he likes to have us think so. It's a sign of extreme self-consciousness, isn't it?" she added innocently. "When a man is afraid that a woman thinks he is very, very good?"

"That," he said, "is the limit, I'm going to ride by myself."

his judgment; that and experience." But, once goaded to it, who was astonished to find how suddenly it seemed to manifest their personal relations—years and experience falling from his shoulders like a cloak which had concealed a man very nearly his own age, years and experience adding themselves to her, and at least an inch to her stature to redress the balance between them.

It had amused him immensely as he realized the subtle change, and it pleased him, too, because no man of thirty-five comes to be treated like a grandfather by a girl of nineteen, even if she has not yet worn the polish from her first pair of high heeled shoes.

"It's astonishing," he said, "how little respect and deference and command there is in these days."

"I do respect you," she insisted, "especially your inferiority of purpose. You said you were going to ride by yourself. But, do you know, I don't believe you are of a particularly solitary disposition. Are you?"

He laughed at first, then suddenly his face fell.

"Not from choice," he said under his breath. Her quick ear heard, and she turned, semi-serious, questioning him with raised eyebrows.

"Nothing. I was just muttering. I've a villainous habit of muttering 'muddy nothings'."

"You did say something!"

"No, only glibly said, the mere mark of a man's mind."

"You did. I was rude not to repeat it when I ask you."

"Then repeat what you said to yourself."

"Do you wish me to?" he asked, raising his eyes so gravely that the smile faded from his lips and voice when she answered: "I beg your pardon, Captain Selwyn. I did not know you were serious."

"Oh, I'm not," he returned lightly. "I'm never serious. No man who solicizes can be taken seriously. Don't you know, Miss Gerold, that the crowning absurdity of all tragedy is the soliloquy?"

Her smile became delightfully uncertain. She did not quite understand him, though her instinct warned her that for a second something had happened that she understood.

Riding forward with him through the crisp sunshine of mid-December, the word "tragedy" still sounding in her ears, her thoughts reverted naturally to the only tragedy besides her own which had ever come very near to her—his own.

Could he have meant that? Did people mention such things after they had happened? Did they not rather conceal them, hide them deeper and deeper with the aid of time and the kindly years for a burial past all recollection?

Troubled, uncomfortably intent on excluding every thought or train of ideas evoked, she put her mount to a gallop. But thought kept pace with her.

SUPREME COURT AT WORK

JUSTICES ALL PRESENT WHEN THE TERM IS OPENED.

First Day Given to Formal Call on President—Calendar is Usually Large.

Washington, Oct. 12.—After a recess of more than four months the supreme court of the United States resumed business Monday and will continue in term until next June. All the nine justices have returned from their respective summer homes, so there was a full bench on the first day of the sitting.

As has long been the court's custom, no business beyond making a formal call on the president was transacted Monday. This call is one of the four most formal ceremonies occurring in Washington official life. Immediately after convening at noon carriages were ordered and, accompanied by the clerk of the court and its marshal, the court as a body proceeded to the White House, where all the members met the chief executive in a formal and official manner. The ceremony concluded, they returned to the capitol and dispersed for the day.

A large attendance of attorneys is expected on Tuesday and many motions and petitions will be presented. With these disposed of the court will proceed to the hearing of arguments in the cases on the docket.

The court will begin business with a larger calendar than it has had at the beginning of a term since the passage of the court of appeals act. At the close of business Saturday there were 672 cases on the docket as against 180 cases at this time last year. A majority of the cases came over from last term, but the number docketed during the recess exceeded those docketed in the recess of 1907 by 18.

This indicates a growth in the business of the court despite most earnest efforts on the part of its members to hold it down.

GEORGIA NEGRO LYNCHED.

Killed by Mob for Shooting at a Man and Woman.

Empire, Ga., Oct. 12.—A negro named Henry White was shot to death by a mob at Youker, six miles from here Saturday night. White, it is said, started out to "shoot up" the family of Thomas Allen, and on his way met another negro, whom he shot and wounded for refusing to join him in his expedition. He went on to Allen's and shot at him and his wife, running them away from their home. A posse gathered, pursued and captured White and placed him in the lockup. About 11 o'clock at night a band of unknown men took White from the lockup, carried him about a mile from Youker, tied him to a tree, and riddled him with bullets.

Jones admitted to Coroner Nevitt that he shot McPherson, but claims that he acted in self-defense. The two men had been drinking. It is said, McPherson, who was 29 years old, had been working on Jones' farm since he was discharged from the United States Marine corps on June 24 last.

TAFT STARTS ON HIS FINAL TOUR

OHIO, THE SOUTH AND EASTERN STATES ON ITINERARY.

FEELS SURE OF SUCCESS

Bryan, Resting at Lincoln, Equally Confident of Victory—Western Quakers Adopt Resolution Against Cannon.

Cincinnati, Oct. 12.—William H. Taft Sunday climbed Mount Auburn, the highest of Cincinnati's seven hills, and then climbed the stairway of the water tower which surmounts the hill. Previous to this exercise, which the candidate took in anticipation of his three weeks in a private car, he attended Christ Episcopal church with Mrs. Taft.

The Taft special left Cincinnati at seven o'clock Monday morning for three days in Ohio, three days in the south, next Sunday in Washington, a day in New Jersey and Maryland, another in Ohio, three days in Indiana, a week in New York, with a closing meeting of the campaign in Youngstown on the night before election, and then home to vote.

Confident of Victory.

Preceding this, the final effort of the campaign, the candidate expressed himself as not only fit for the duties which devolve upon him, but confident of the result of the campaign. Again he said, as he did during his western trip: "I shall be elected president of the United States."

United States Senator William Allen Smith of Michigan will accompany and assist the candidate in his work in Ohio and Leslie M. Shaw, formerly secretary of the treasury, will travel with Mr. Taft in the south.

Bryan Also Sure of Success.

Patience, Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 12.—Having spent several active days last week on the stump, William J. Bryan devoted most of his time Sunday to resting up preparatory to a hard week of campaigning in Nebraska, Colorado and Wyoming. He arrived here at 10:30 o'clock in the morning, direct from St. Joseph, Mo., where Saturday night he got a rousing reception. The westward journey will be begun early Tuesday morning.

Speaking of the results of his campaigning so far the Democratic candidate declared himself as being confident of success. He stated that reports received by him indicate a constantly increasing sentiment toward the Democratic party.

Quakers Against Cannon, Lawrence, Kan., Oct. 12.—The yearling meeting of the Friends (Quakers) church of Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Nebraska, in session here with 1,000 members present, passed a resolution whereby a petition will be sent to the house of representatives asking the members not to elect Joseph C. Cannon speaker on account of his attitude toward the temperance question. This is considered remarkable as Cannon was re-elected in the Quaker faith.

The mounted police are investigating and their report is expected within a few days.

BOARD MEETING OF CONGREGATIONALISTS

The reports show that political conditions not only in Turkey but in other countries where the board works have opened its field greatly. In China mention is made of two provinces which together have about 40,000,000 people where it has been made unlawful to carry idols in procession through the public streets, which fact gives striking evidence of the widespread breakdown of the idol-worship of the natives.

Following the formal opening this afternoon the most of the sessions of the convention will be held in the new Academy of Music. The general prosperity of the board will be brought out in addresses by returned missionaries from different countries. Other speakers will include the Rev. L. C. Crisp, Washington, former president of Robert College at Constantinople; Rev. Dr. Charles L. Thwing, president of Western Reserve University; Rev. Dr. Howard S. Hiles, president of the Protestant college at Beirut, Syria; and Rev. Dr. S. Parker Culman. The annual sermon is to be preached this evening by Rev. Dr. Charles S. Mills of St. Louis of St. Louis.

DECEIES THE PERPETUAL GRIN.

Writer Takes Issue with Man Who Says "Keep a-Smiling."

A favorite motto with many people in these latter days, when the whole-some gospel of cheerfulness is being preached so extensively, is, "Keep a-smiling." It is a very good motto within limitations. In so far as its adoption as a rule of conduct prevents the wearing of a lugubrious countenance when no overwhelming grief or calamity is being endured or is impending, in so far as it overcomes the tendency to look on the dark side and anticipate evil, in so far as it enables one to look for the best in all situations and to keep up his courage when troubles threaten—in all these respects it is a maxim worthy of commendation.

But it should not be interpreted too liberally. Its spirit rather than its letter should be observed. Its spirit means a persistent hopefulness, a refusal to be cast down by discouraging or unfavorable circumstances, a sturdy defiance of adverse fate. Its literal observance may include these things, but it means also a perpetual grin, and a perpetual grin leads to thoughts of crime on the part of beholders. No one becomes so irritating or so suspicious as a maddening effect upon sensitive associates as the man or woman who wears the "smile that never comes off."—Indianapolis Star.

The message said that the fleet will reach Honolulu Tuesday at noon.

Sleep Walking.

Men, who men, consider that sleep walking is nearly related to a state of hypnosis and they call it spontaneous somnambulism as distinguished from artificial somnambulism, hypnosis. Some persons are subject to both states and are practically the same under both conditions, save that in sleep walking they are less amenable to directions.

Wedding Notes.

The bride—just think of it, dear! Fifty years from yesterday will be our golden anniversary.

The Man With the Lower Price?

You will always find the man with a price just a little inferior to the man who is bold enough to offer a quality at a decent price, but usually if the matter is sifted it will be found that the man with the inferior price offers an article of inferior quality.

This is true of the lumber business more so than in anything else, as quality in lumber is hard to judge by the layman and is often misrepresented here by unscrupulous dealers.
